RICHARD ROSENBAUM, and

ANN P. ROSENBAUM,

Respondents.

ON PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

to the

APPELLATE COURT OF ILLINOIS,

First District.

Jean Rosenbaum, Pro Se.

ON PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI to the APPELLATE COURT OF ILLINOIS, First District.

(In this document, Petitioner, JEAN ROSENBAUM, is referred to as "Mother;" Respondent, RICHARD ROSENBAUM is referred to as "Son.")

(a) Questions presented for review, are:

1. Whether the PERMANENT INJUNCTION ORDER in its modified form entered by trial court, and affirmed by the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, violates Mother's Federal Constitutional rights. [1]

2. Whether the circumstances justified the entry of the Modified Permanent Injunction Order, in its modified form.

[1] The Injunction prevents Mother from seeing or talking to Son permanently in any practical manner.

3. Whether the Permanent Injunction Order, both in its original and modified forms, should be voided because of its non-compliance with State and Federal law.

4. Whether the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, abused its discretion by affirming trial court's entry of the modified Injunction.

5. Whether the Appellate Court severely misapplied the Illinois Domestic Violence Act of 1986, thereby violating Mother's Federal Constitutional rights.

6. Whether the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, abused its discretion by not ruling on all basic issues of grave importance; namely (1) a parent's right to communicate with an adult child; (2)

if a parent has a right to investigate a report of an adult child's violent death or injury.

(b) The parties to the proceeding are:

1. JEAN ROSENBAUM, Mother, the Defendant in trial court, Appellant in the Appellate Court, Petitioner in the Illinois Supreme Court, also the Petitioner in the U. S. Supreme Court, who has acted Pro Se throughout.

2. RICHARD ROSENBAUM, Son, joint-Plaintiff in trial court, joint-Appellee in Appellate Court, and joint-Respondent in the Illinois Supreme Court and in the U. S. Supreme Court.

3. ANN P. (PHARMAKIS) ROSENBAUM, Wife of RICHARD, joint-Plaintiff in trial court, joint-Appellee in Appellate Court, joint-Respondent both in the Illinois Supreme Court and in the U. S. Supreme Court. She is the daughter-in-law of Mother, and has not appeared once from the inception of the court proceedings, although all documents still bear her name.

(d) The OPINION entered by the Appellate Court of Illinois on May 23, 1989, is officially reported as Rosenbaum v. Rosenbaum (1st Dist. 1989), 184 Ill. App. 3d 987, 541 N.E. 2d 872.

(e) Grounds for jurisdiction, under which jurisdiction of this Court is invoked, are:

(i) The OPINION entered by the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, was entered on May 23, 1989 (Appendix, pp. A-(11-12)). Its companion MODIFIED OPINION was entered July 25, 1989, Nunc Pro Tunc May 23, 1989 (Appendix, pp. A-(13-25)). The OPINIONS affirmed the trial court modification of the Permanent Injunc- Order (Appendix, pp. A-(1-4); A-(7-8)).

(ii) The Appellate Court denied Mother's PETITION FOR REHEARING in its Order entered June 21, 1989 (Appendix, p. A-(26)). The last Order entered by the Supreme Court of Illinois was its denial of Mother's motion for leave to file a motion for reconsideration of order denying petition for leave to appeal, entered November 15, 1989, (Appendix, p.A-(30)), the actual denial of the petition for leave to appeal having been entered on October 5, 1989 (Appendix, p. A-(29)).

(iii) Not applicable.

(iv) The statutory provision believed to confer on this Court jurisdiction to review the judgment or decree in question by writ of certiorari, is:

> "28 U.S.C.A. §1257(a). Final judgments or decrees rendered by the highest court of a State in which a decision could be had, may be reviewed by the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari ..... where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is specially set up or claimed under the Constitution, or the treaties or statutes of .... the United States."

(f) The constitutional provisions involved are United States Constitution, Amendments I, V, VIII, IX, X and XIV, the applicable portions of which are set forth following:

AMENDMENT I. "Congress shall make no law ..... abridging the freedom of speech .... or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

AMENDMENT V. "No person ..... shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law ....."

AMENDMENT VIII. "Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted."

AMENDMENT IX. "The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to disparage others retained by the people."

AMENDMENT X. "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

AMENDMENT XIV. "..... No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities or citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

The main Illinois Statute involved is the Illinois Domestic Violence Act of 1986, Ill. Rev. Stat. (1987), Ch. 40, Pars. 2311.1-2312.27, which the Appellate Court uses extensively in its OPINION for justification of its decision. Mother also cited parts of the Act to rebut the OPINION in her timely-filed PETITION FOR REHEARING. A few of the pertinent portions of the Act appear in the Appendix hereto, as follows:

Sec. 2311-3(1) .....A-(31-32)

Sec. 2311-3(8) .....A-(34)

(g) Statement of the Case, with Facts.

In 1985, when Mother attended an event given by a political organization, a member appeared and loudly announced that Mother's son, RICHARD, had been found shot and dumped in Lake Michigan. Everyone was horrified, and shortly thereafter, not having the son's home telephone number or access to his home, she telephoned his office. She could not talk to him or see him; nor did she receive a return telephone call. Meanwhile, she received a new report that Richard was alive, but had lost several limbs. She telephoned attorney EDWARD A. BERMAN, who was handling a divorce case RICHARD's father had filed against her (which she was strongly resisting), and asked him to arrange a brief appointment in his office with RICHARD, so Mother could reassure herself of his condition. Instead, shortly thereafter, a COMPLAINT FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF AND DAMAGES was filed against her by the Plaintiffs, through Attorney Berman. The Complaint was signed by the attorney alone.

In Mother's Answer to the Complaint, she explained her belief that the Son was copying his Father's behaviour, Father having refused to talk to or see Mother for a long time.

The young couple, married for over 11 years, have never invited Mother into their home, nor has ANN ever voluntarily acknowledged any present Mother sent. Father has gifted ANN with a fur coat, and loaned Son thousands of dollars to buy a proper "condo" home for ANN. Mother visited ANN only once at her office, to see if she received her $100 anniversary present, and was threatened by her. Mother's attempts to reach the daughter-in-law by phone had been futile.

Plaintiffs received a temporary restraining order against Mother, which was later replaced with a Permanent Injunction Order entered September 30, 1985. The Order, although restraining Mother from contacting the children either in-person or verbally, in Pars. 4 and 5 thereof required Son to briefly telephone Mother three times a year, and see her for a short visit one time a year, (Appendix, A-(1-4)).

On March 3, 1987, plaintiffs filed a MOTION TO MODIFY AND VACATE PERMANENT INJUNCTION ORDER, in an attempt to modify or vacate Pars. 4 and 5, because Son "found it unacceptable and intolerable" to telephone Mother (for one minute only, three times a year)!

In her ANSWER, Mother informed the Court (1) that the injunction case was closely related to the divorce case

RICHARD's Father had filed against her through Attorney Berman; (2) that Plaintiffs were currying favor from Father, who was left in control of approximately 90 per cent of the marital property by the Courts; (3) that Mr. Berman had filed the instant suit instead of arranging the short meeting with Son for which she asked when word of his harm reached her; (4) that an unknown third party might be wielding influence over Son; (5) that Mother had offered, through Attorney Berman, to sign a compromise agreement with Son, but she believed the message had NOT been relayed; (6) that although Mother had written RICHARD, as the Injunction Order allowed, the letter had not been picked up from the post-office, etc. The ANSWER also contained Mother's AFFIDAVIT describing Attorney Berman's unusual behaviour when Mother and Son met in his office, and his threatening manner toward both. She described her son's confidences to her after they left, and the menacing stranger who suddenly appeared on the lobby floor.

When the Court denied Plaintiffs' MOTION TO MODIFY AND VACATE, Attorney Berman filed a motion asking for reconsideration of this denial, because RICHARD "has no feeling and cannot communicate" with his Mother, signing it himself. Mother's ANSWER reiterated her belief that Attorney Berman was using the injunction case to "trip her up" in the related divorce case; and that the case, at law, required a change in facts before the injunction could be modified, which had not taken place. She asked that if the Court modified the injunction, that in-increased contacts with Mother be required of Son. Mother later filed for discovery, asking for dental and medical records of Plaintiffs because of possible physical intimidation toward them, and for financial records to learn who might be the "power" behind the scenes influencing them. She filed another Affidavit, describing unknown gentlemen who suddenly appeared in an anteroom when Attorney Berman and Mother were there. They stated their investigation revealed that Mr. Berman was the main investor in a Las Vegas gambling casino of questionable reputation. Judge O'Brien then denied totally Mother's requests for discovery, and vacated Pars. 4 and 5 of the Permanent Injunction Order, now making it impossible for Mother ever to see or talk to her own children in any practical manner. The modification of the Permanent Injunction Order was affirmed by the Appellate Court, upon Mother's appeal.

The following matters appear in the Report of Proceedings, (a part of the official Record on Appeal).

1. Mother told trial court, that she was informed in an unusual way: when Son was very young and living with his Father, someone got control of him by getting him intoxicated and giving him a lot of contracts to sign. He signed them, thinking it was a joke, and he is held to these contracts that might involve a monstrous sum, etc. He must, therefore, do as he is told by some unknown party. Gambling or prostitution may be involved, and there might also be an unusual business reason why he has filed this suit. Mother could not get to the bottom of situation with all discovery denied her. She expressed her belief that Plaintiff ANN might also be involved in some way.

2. The Court was informed that RICHARD's Father, she had unofficially been told recently, whose behaviour Son has used as his model, was in an airplane that flew a distance through an atomic cloud, and probably had been subtly impaired. The episode had been kept "top-secret" and RICHARD's behaviour might be the by-product of this.

3. Father confessed to Mother just recently he had accumulated unrevealed marital funds with the aid of Son and Son's business-financial education. Father himself may be intimidating Son with a threat of loss of financial backing if he does not behave as Dad orders.

4. Appellate Court was told that RICHARD himself may have suffered damage to his judgment when he performed a top-secret mission involving nuclear radiation. Mother asked appeal court for a Prehearing Conference to discuss these matters, but it was denied.

(h) The Federal questions were early raised in the lower Courts, which never ruled on them explicitly, as follows:

a) Amendment I. The violation of Mothers right to free speech was first raised in trial court in 1985 in a MOTION TO STRIKE AND DISMISS COMPLAINT FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF (R. C.40), which was a part of the Record before the Appellate Court. The issue was discussed in Mother's Appellate Brief, page 25, filed in 1988; Appellate Court left the issue untouched in its OPINION, stating (A-(25)) --

3/ Record on Appeal numbers preceded by a "C" refer to the trial court record.

"Since we find defendant's remaining claims of error to be irrelevant to the issues in this case, we need not address them."

The Court will note that trial court entered the Permanent Injunction Order in 1985 after the entry of Constitutional issuesby Mother.

b) Amendments V, XIV. Mention appears in DEFENDANT's ANSWER TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO MODIFY PARTS OF PERMANENT INJUNCTION ORDER (R. C.63) filed in 1985, and Plaintiffs' Motion was then denied by trial court, (R. C. 73). The discussion involving the violation of Mother's Constitutional right of equal protection of law under Amendment XIV appears on page 27 of her Appellate Brief (1988).

c) Amendment VIII. This Amendment was first raised in the Supreme Court of Illinois in Mother's MOTION FOR RE-CONSIDERATION OF DENIAL OF PETITION, but the Court denied her accompanying Motion for Leave to file the Motion (A-(30)).

d) Amendment IX. The Amendment was cited in Mother's MOTION TO STRIKE AND DISMISS COMPLAINT FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF AND DAMAGES, filed in 1985, but nevertheless the Permanent Injunction Order was entered. It was discussed additionally on page 27 of Mother's Appellate Brief filed in 1988.

e) Amendment X. The Amendment was also cited in Mother's MOTION TO STRIKE AND DISMISS COMPLAINT FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF AND DAMAGES filed in 1985, and further cited on page 27 of Appellate Brief of Mother filed in 1988, but apparently ignored by both Courts.

(i) Not applicable; no Federal Court was involved.

(j) ARGUMENT.

There are several special and important reasons why review on writ of certiorari should be granted, as follows:

1. The state court of last resort; namely, the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, Second Division (the Supreme Court of Illinois denied the petition for appeal), has decided important questions of Federal law by apparently determining that they are of no importance and, therefore, not ruling on them! It then entered a decision that conflicts with applicable decisions of the Supreme Court of United States. The Supreme Court has said in Moore v. City of East

Cleveland (1977), 431 U. S. 494, 503, 97 S.Ct. 1932:

> "A host of cases .... have consistently acknowledged a private realm of family life which the State cannot enter ....
> "Constitution protects the sanctity of the family precisely because the institution of the family is deeply rooted in this Nation's history and tradition."

In Schneider v. Irvington (1939) 308 U. S. 147, 160, 60 S.Ct. 146, the Supreme Court ruled that under the United States Constitution, the freedom of speech secured by the First Amendment against abridgement by the United States, is similarly secured to all persons by the Fourteenth Amendment against abridgement by a State.

The Appellate Court has ignored the foregoing principles, affirming a Permanent Injunction that prevents Mother from seeing or talking to her children for the rest of her life! To justify this inequitable decision, the Court seriously "bent out of shape" the Illinois Domestic Violence Act of 1986, Ill. Rev. Stat. (1987), Ch. 40, pars. 2311-1 - 2312.27. The stated purpose of the Act appears in Sec. 2311-2, that says:

> "Purposes; This Act shall be liberally construed and applied to promote its underlying purposes, which are to:
> (1) Recognize domestic violence as a serious crime against the individual and society which produces family disharmony in thousands of Illinois families, promotes a pattern of escalating violence which frequently culminates in intra-family homicide, and creates an emotional atmosphere that is not conductive to healthy childhood development;"

The Appellate Court has erroneously considered the inquiry Mother made about Son through his office a "serious crime." At the same time, although the Court recognized the issue when stating --

> "The issue raised herein involves the ordering of an adult child to communicate with and visit a parent, and the enjoining of a parent from communicating with an adult child except by mail. We do not believe that such matters have been addressed > heretofore in Illinois, and we know of no law under which the trial court may so order an adult child." (See Appendix (A-(20)), it did not explicitly rule on the issue of Mother's Constitutional right to "free speech," etc. being violated, Amendment I, Amendment XIV. Nor did it rule on the issues presented - if a parent has the right to investigate a report about a grown-child's violent death or injury, or the enjoining of a parent.

The appeal court, although quoting the Act, does not require any findings as to nature, frequency, severity, pattern and consequences of respondent's past abuse of petitioner, etc., as specified by Sec. 2312-14(14)(c)(1) of the Act. It did not try to enforce the "balance of hardship" clause, as required by Sec. 2312-14(14)(d) of the Act, or 2312-21.

The Appellate MODIFIED OPINION states that although the Domestic Violence Act was not cited by Plaintiffs, etc. (Appendix, A-(21-22)), it would not vacate the Permanent Injunction because Plaintiffs could refile! It does not attempt fair treatment of both Plaintiffs and Defendant, and bases its decision improperly on prospective acts that have not happened, with severe penalty to Mother. This denies her due process and equal protection of law under Amendment XIV, and her other Constitutional protections under Amendments IX and X. It also imposes on her a "cruel and unusual punishment", forbidden by Amendment VIII.

It is apparent that the circumstances did NOT justify the entry of the PERMANENT INJUNCTION ORDER, either originally or in its modified form, and it should be voided, which the Appellate Court refuses to do, because another action might be filed, etc!

Also, it is quite likely that the lower appeal court severely misapplied the Illinois Domestic Violence Act of 1986, and that it abused its discretion by not specifically ruling on the basic issues of importance; namely,

"(1) A parent's right to communicate with an adult child.

"(2) If a parent has a right to investigate a report of an adult child's violent death or injury."

2. The Appellate Court of Illinois, the State Court of last resort, has, in effect, decided a Federal question in such a way that conflicts with the decision of another State court. The Appellate Court has affirmed the modification of a Permanent Injunction Order, making it considerably stronger against Mother's family rights, whereas a Florida decision, Paul's Drugs, Inc. v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company (1965, Fla. App.

D. 3, 175 So. 2d 203, 206, determined:

> "A perpetual injunction is unknown to the law, and an attempt to impose such a sanction is an abuse by the court of its equity powers."

pertaining to Amendment VIII, in Alston v. Coughlin (S.D. N.Y. 1987), 668 F. Supp. 822, 826, the Court stated that the Constitutional prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment includes punishments which, although not physically barbarous, involve unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain, or are grossly disproportionate to severity of crime. The foregoing statement is totally on point with the instant Rosenbaum case.

In conclusion, Mother cites the case of Board of Regents of State Colleges v. Roth (Wis. 1972), 408 U.S. 564, 92 S.Ct. 2701, 33 L.Ed. 2d 548, that says:

> "Where a person's good name, reputation, honor or integrity is at > stake because of what the government is doing to him (her), notice and an opportunity to be heard are essential."

The Court's attention is also called to the fact that although the Illinois Domestic Violence Act of 1986 likewise protects Mother from mistreatment by a family member, Ill. Rev. Stat. (1987), Ch. 40, Secs. 2311-3(8), 2312-1, this fact was not heeded by the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, that initiated the use of the Act in this case for the benefit of the Plaintiffs.

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons and others, including the fact that parents of grown children whom they love dearly, are in need of more effective legal guidelines in facing their family problems, than those used by the Appellate Court of Illinois, First District, it is prayed that this PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI to the APPELLATE COURT OF ILLINOIS, First District, be allowed.

Respectfully submitted,

Jean Rosenbaum

RICHARD ROSENBAUM and ANN P. ROSENBAUM, Plaintiffs-Appellees, v. JEAN ROSENBAUM, Defendant-Appellant.	)APPEAL FROM THE)CIRCUIT COURT OF)COOK COUNTY)THE HONORABLE)THOMAS J. O'BRIEN,)JUDGE PRESIDING.

MODIFIED OPINION.

JUSTICE SCARIANO delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant, Jean Rosenbaum, appeals from an order of the circuit court of Cook County vacating portions of a permanent injunction order requiring the plaintiff Richard Rosenbaum, her son, to telephone her no less than once every three months and to meet her in person at least once each year.

This cause originated on the complaint of Richard Rosenbaum and Ann P. Rosenbaum, his wife, seeking a permanent injunction against the defendant, his mother, to restrain her from contacting the plaintiffs by telephone at their home or at their places of employment, and from contacting any personnel at their places of employment.

After an evidentiary hearing on the complaint and pro se answer, the trial court entered a permanent injunction order on September 30, 1985, in favor of the plaintiffs and against defendant:

> "1. Defendant is temporarily and permanently enjoined from verbally contacting plaintiffs, except as provided herein below.
> "2. Defendant is temporarily and permanently enjoined from telephoning the plaintiffs at their places of employment or home and from visiting either of them at their places of employment or home.
> "3. Defendant may communicate with plaintiffs by written correspondence and plaintiff Richard Rosenbaum shall supply defendant with any new home address he may incur for the forwarding of mail, by six months thereafter.

"4. Plaintiff Richard Rosenbaum shall telephone defendant no less than once every three months, which telephone conversation by Richard shall extend for no less than one minute.

"5. At least once each year, starting on or about September 26, 1986, Richard Rosenbaum and defendant shall meet in person at a neutral place to be agreed upon, with arrangements to be made through Edward A. Berman or one of defendant's other children.

"6. This permanent injunction shall issue for good cause shown and without bond.

"7. The court retains jurisdiction for purposes of enforcing the provisions contained herein."

A month later the plaintiffs filed a motion to delete paragraphs four and five of the injunction order, but their motion was denied. On March 3, 1987, the plaintiffs filed a motion to vacate the permanent injunction order alleging that the terms and conditions of the order requiring plaintiff Richard to call the defendant were unacceptable and intolerable. This motion was also denied on June 8, 1987, and one month later plaintiffs filed a motion to reconsider that denial alleging that plaintiff Richard was totally unwilling to allow the defendant to become a part of his life in any way; that "it is not within the province of the Court to regulate all the behavior of individuals, but the injunction seeks to do this"; that compliance with the order is not feasible and is effectively meaningless because "the calls every three months will not fulfill the constant suspicion of the defendant that her son is being or has been harmed in some way"; and that equity does not command that a "court have jurisdiction to supervise feelings between adult parties by imposition of arbitrary demands."

The defendant filed a pro se answer that equity requires a change of facts to revoke or modify a permanent injunction; that as a parent of plaintiff Richard she has a common law right to see him; that it is not unreasonable behavior for her to desire to see her son; and that since he does not respond to her letters, it is not a proper answer to the problem. Defendant then filed motions for the production of documents and interrogatories directed to plaintiff Richard. After holding a hearing on all motions, on October 26, 1987, the trial court entered an order denying plaintiff's motion to reconsider and denying defendant's motions for discovery, but it vacated paragraphs four and five of the permanent injunction order of September 30, 1985. Defendant filed a timely motion to vacate or modify the latter order or in the alternative to vacate the permanent injunction order entered on September 30, 1985. The motion was denied and defendant now appeals.

Defendant contends that (1) pursuant to section 102(2) of the Marriage and Dissolution of Marriage Act (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1985, ch. 40, par. 102(2)), the permanent injunction was entered in accordance with the legislative intent to safeguard family relationships and that the statute did not set any age limits on that goal; (2) the injunction order in its modified form violates her State and Federal constitutional rights to exercise freedom of speech, citing Santosky v. Kramer (1962), 455 U.S. 745, 71 L. Ed. 2d 599, 102 S. Ct. 1388, and Moore v. City of East Cleveland (1977) 431 U.S. 494, 52 L. Ed. 2d 531, 97 S. Ct. 1932; (3) the injunction order in its modified form does not comply with the provisions of section 11-101 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1987, ch. 110, par. 11-101) because it failed to set forth the reasons for its entry; (4) the trial court abused its discretion by denying her right to discovery, her right to cross-examination into the plaintiffs' motives for their action, her right to testify as a witness, and failing to consider that despite the fact that plaintiff Richard said he wanted nothing to do with the defendant, he did not waive inheritance rights to her estate; (5) the plaintiffs failed to legally justify the injunction order by alleging and showing actual and substantial injury to them as required by Barco Manufacturing Co. v. Wright (1956), 10 Ill. 2d 157, 139 N.E. 2d 227, or that there was any urgency in the situation or irreparable harm to them without modification of the permanent injunction order as required by Sadat v. American Motors Corp. (1984), 104 Ill. 2d 105, 470 N.E. 2d 997; and (6) she is entitled to and justified in receiving costs from the plaintiffs because of the litigation of this matter.

The issue raised herein involves the ordering of an adult child to communicate with and visit a parent, and the enjoining of a parent from communicating with an adult child except by mail. We do not believe that such matters have been addressed heretofore in Illinois, and we know of no law under which the trial court may so order an adult child.

However, the legislature has recognized in the Domestic Violence Act of 1986 (the Act) (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1987, ch. 40, pars. 2311-1 - 2312-27) that courts do have a role in resolving some family disputes other than those we encounter, for example, in our domestic relations and juvenile laws, none of which is pertinent here. The Domestic Violence Act provides that one being harassed, defined in part as repeated "telephoning (of) petitioner's place of employment, home or residence," by a family member may file a petition for an order of protection. (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1987, ch. 40, pars. 2311-3(4)(ii), 2312-1, 2312-14.) In granting relief, a court may enter "such injunctive relief as may be necessary or appropriate to prevent further abuse (or harassment)  if supported by the balance of hardships." Ill. Rev. Stat. 1987, ch. 40, par. 2312-14(b)(3).

While this statute was enacted after the present action was commenced, it was in effect at the time the order was entered. In the instant case, plaintiffs did not seek and the trial court did not enter a protective order; indeed, at no time did plaintiffs cite the Act or its predecessor (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1985, ch. 40, pars. 2301-1 - 2303-5, 2305-1) in their pleadings or to the Judge. However, were this court to vacate the injunction, on the basis that such a family dispute is not justiciable absent some legislative enactment invoked by them, plaintiffs could refile their action under the Act; accordingly, to conserve judicial resources and promote efficiency, we will consider whether the injunction, as modified, is proper under the Act. We find that it is.

The Act grants the trial judge the authority to order "appropriate" relief to prevent harassment. Enjoining defendant from telephoning or "verbally" contacting plaintiff Richard, while allowing her to communicate with him through written correspondence, is clearly within the trial court's authority under the Act. (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1987, ch. 40, pars. 2312-14 (b)(1), (13).) Additionally, requiring plaintiff son to supply defendant with any new home address, so that she can write to him, is appropriate under the facts of this case. However, requiring plaintiff Richard to call and visit his mother is not "necessary or appropriate to prevent further (harassment)" (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1987, ch. 40, par. 2312-14(b)(13)); accordingly, such an Order is not authorized by the Act. Nor would it be proper under any other Illinois law.

A similar issue was decided in Stanley F. Schmidt v. Janet Schmidt (1983), 313 Pa. Super. 83, 459 A.2d 421. There, the court held that an adult handicapped woman who had not been adjudicated incompetent, "enjoys many of the same rights and privileges enjoyed by other adult citizens," including > "a constitutionally protected freedom of choice to make certain basic decisions regarding marriage, procreation, family life and privacy. See e.g.: Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 93 S.Ct. 705, 35 L.Ed.2d 147 (1973); Stanley v. Illinois, 405

U.S. 645, 92 S.Ct. 1208, 31 L.Ed.2d 551 (1972); Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 92 S.Ct. 1029, 31 L.Ed.2d 340 (1972); Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 390, 85 S.Ct. 1678, 14 L.Ed.2d 510 (1965); Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625, 67 L.Ed. 1042 (1923). This freedom of choice, it would seem, should include the same right which an adult has to refuse to visit a parent,  as well as freedom to make important decisions regarding personal preferences and associates." 459 A.2d 421, 422-23.

In the instant case, plaintiff son has chosen not to keep in touch with his mother. This is a sad and unfortunate situation; however, it takes more than a mere secular tribunal to command filial devotion. We agree with the trial court that paragraphs four and five of the permanent injunction order should be vacated.

With regard to defendant's argument that the injunction order in its modified form does not conform with section 11-101 of our Code of Civil Procedure Ill. Rev. Stat. 1987, ch. 110, par. 11-101), providing for temporary restraining orders, we note that the order appealed from is a permanent injunction, and thus that section is not applicable to this case. Since we find defendant's remaining claims of error to be irrelevant to the issues in this case, we need not address them.

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the circuit court of Cook County vacating paragraphs four and five of the permanent injunction order is affirmed.

AFFIRMED.
